

Presentations

An introduction to the vocabulary and expressions that are most commonly used when giving presentations. After looking at the different types of presentation, commonly used equipment and some common false friends, students move on to the more specific language used at each stage of the presentation: introductions, opening, main body and conclusion. There is an emphasis on signposting - phrases which indicate the flow or progression of a presentation, referring to visual aids such as charts and graphs as well as the essential expressions to describe trends.

The course then moves on to focus on virtual presentations; looking at specific vocabulary as well as useful expressions for managing participants, dealing with technical issues and referring to visual aids. There is a focus on extended reading with texts on the subject of technology in presentations and how to use it effectively.

The areas of dealing with questions, interruptions and agreeing or disagreeing are covered with listening and writing exercises that give the student authentic examples of different ways to express ourselves in both formal and informal situations.

Students are also shown different examples of the language used when socialising in a presentation or conference setting, with exposure to the typical questions that are asked in these situations.

Finally, there is a comprehensive review of all the language covered on the course in order to consolidate the areas covered.
